Biographical Information:

The Daughters of the American Revolution (D.A.R.) was founded in 1890. The group defines itself as a "volunteer women's service organization dedicated to promoting patriotism, preserving American history, and securing America's future through better education for children." Members of the D. A. R. are required to "prove lineal descent from a patriot of the American Revolution" in order to be eligible for membership. While the D. A. R. is principally a genealogical society, the organization also supports historic preservation initiatives and collects historical material, including publications, decorative arts, manuscripts and early American imprints.

Scope and Content:

This collection consists of issues of the Daughters of the American Revolution magazine. The magazines include articles about various topics in American history and genealogical research. The magazine shares the National Society's love of American history, preservation and genealogy with readers around the world. Each issue celebrates the American story through a selection of historical subjects from the Colonial period through the early decades of the new republic.

Series:

This collection is not a complete run of this periodical, but rather a few random issues. The collection is organized chronologically.
